Education Wrap-Up

Unless we address mentality of types of jobs – profitable jobs:
   “If women can do it – it can’t be too hard” → eliminate that devaluing mentality

Because education doesn’t have:
   - Supply-demand
   - Instant profit margin

It isn’t valued because its not shown dollar amount on what it means to the economy.

Consider what the women want as a choice.

Some young girls man not known enough about the higher tech/ higher paid jobs and get a good knowledge base.

Bill Brundage – New Economy

Need an office under the New Economy (etc.) to act as a hub for theses organizations/ and information exchange.

Process has been very democratic.

Can choose what you are interested in.

Trying to talk about more focused things instead of the more global things.

At the same time we are trying to get more women into math and science jobs, but we need to help raise the salaries.

Economic factors (get edited out 1st draft) – raise salaries of teachers.

Incredible to see all the women at different education, job levels across the state. All the energy is inspiring.
Partnerships and need to cross areas to work together, across agency and association/organizations to expand across the state instead of doing on our own.

There are resources available – to not reinvent the wheel. Need success stories and models.

Parking Lot Issues

Each institution should designate a student services generalist to specialize in assisting women through the processes of applying for admission and financial aid, career counseling, academic advising and student support.

Find a way to lower cost of online classes/programs through Kentucky Virtual University to make more affordable/accessible for women. (Classes now range $600-$950/class).
